"The Sabine family can be traced back as far
"as A. D. 1600. The first we find of them is in "the County of Hampshire (Hants), England, at "Titchfield, and towns near thereto. They were
"Puritans and Nonconformists of early date and
"glorious memory.

"J. S."

REV. JAMES SABINE

REV. JAMES SABINE

b. May 26, 1774, at Fareham, Hants, England, and m. August 19, 1800, Ann Danford, only daughter of Isaac Danford, Esqre., attorney at law, County of Gloucester, England. He entered the Presbyterian ministry and lived in—

Uley, Gloucestershire	1800-04
Croyden, Surrey	1804-06
Deptford and Greenwich, London	1806-08
Tunbridge Wells, Kent	1808-15
Tottenham, near London	1816
St. John's, Newfoundland	1816-18
Boston, Massachusetts	1818-30
Bethel, Vermont	1830-45

He left England with his wife and seven children, sailing May 6, 1816, from London, and arrived on the 15th of the following month at Saint John's, where he preached until after the two great fires which devastated that city. He then removed to Boston, where he arrived with his family July 18, 1818, and soon commenced to preach in Boylston Hall, corner of Washington and Boylston streets. The society thus started became the Essex Street Church, the corner stone of which was laid January 26, 1819, and the church dedicated December 15, 1819. In the course of two years differences arose and by a vote of March 6, 1822, it was resolved to withdraw to Boylston Hall. This body retained the name of Essex Street Church until November 26, 1823, when they were received into the Londonderry Presbytery. Thus they became the Second Presbyterian Church of Boston, but they are known as the First Presbyterian Church.

In 1828 Mr. Sabine withdrew from the Presbyterian Church, took orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and was ordained priest by Bishop Griswold. He was the first rector of Grace Church, Temple Street, Boston, and was, in 1830, transferred to the diocese of Vermont, and became rector of Christ Church, Bethel, where he preached for fifteen years. His wife d. October 2, 1837, at Bethel, and on October 11, 1840, he m. Mrs. Dorcas W. Monroe, widow of Rev. Matt Monroe, at Trinity Church, Bridgewater, Mass. She d. October 14, 1880, at Newport, R. I., aged 93 years. He d. October 2, 1845, at the home of his daughter, in Randolph Center, Vermont. He was the author of an Ecclesiastical History (Boston, 1820), as well as numerous published sermons.
